Land Use Planning Assistance to Reduce Community Wildfire Risks

- Free professional assistance to better plan the wildland-urban interface (WUI).
- Trainings, peer-to-peer learning opportunities, and workshops.
- Site visits, resources, research, and consulting support.

The Community Planning Assistance for Wildfire (CPAW) program works with communities to reduce wildfire risk through improved land use planning. Assistance comes at no cost to the community and recommendations are adopted at the discretion of local jurisdictions. We are now accepting applications from qualified communities for 2019.

Application Details

- Eligible communities include U.S. cities, towns, or counties that have authority over local land use and zoning decisions.
- Applications must be submitted jointly by the community planning and fire departments.
- Communities should be willing to commit staff time and enter into a Memorandum of Understanding.
- Application due: October 5, 2018
